SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU WASHINGTON-Use of the giant aircraft carrier Lexington as an emergency electric lighting plant for Tacoma. Wash., to meet the electricity shortage caused by a severe draught, is asked in a resolution introduced in the Senate by C. C. Dill (D.), Sena-tor from Washington.

The six electric turbo-generators of the Lexington can produce approximately 200,000 horsepower, sufficient to supply the needs of a city of 2,000,000 persons. The vessel is at urged that it be made immediately available to supply current for the which has been working in Paris

The injection of the Senate into the matter was occasioned by the reluctance of Charles Francis Adams, Secretary of the Navy, to authorize this unprecedented peaceful use of this glgantic electric battle craft. When the light rainfall made it impossible for the Tacoma hydroelectric system to deliver the needed electricity, power was drawn from the Seattle system, with which it is interconnected. The mayors of the two cities, followed by a Congressional delegation, urged Secretary Adams to order the Lexington made fast to the Tacoma piers and its generators con-nected to the city power lines.

Denies Signatories' Right to Take Action to Protect Kellogg Pact

Affirms Frontier Activities Were Merely Defense Against Chinese Attacks

In a strongly worded memorandum handed to the French Ambassador at Moscow, the Soviet Government terms the intervention of the United States in the dispute with China as an unwarranted and unfriendly act. It claims that no power or group of powers signatory to the Kellogg pact have the right to assume responsibility for protecting the pact.

The memorandum declares that Chinese seizure of the Chinese Eastern Railway was made without warning or without previously lodging any laims and that any warlike activities on the part of the Russians on the Manchurian frontier were merely by way of defense against subsequent Chinese aggression.

It further declares that accord has already been partially reached with the Government of Manchuria.

MOSCOW (A) - The Soviet Governnent notified the United States on Dec. 4 that it could not consider the American note reminding the Russian and Chinese Governments of their Kellogg pact obligation as a

Mr. Hunt met President Hoover in war relief work. He was secretary of the unemployment conference of 1921 of which Mr. Hoover was chairman. He was the able young indus-trial engineer behind the scenes who did the detail work in Mr. Hoover's conference on business cycles and unemployment in 1923; on seasonal operation in the construction industries in 1924; and on recent economic changes, in 1929. Mr. Hoover likes to work through conference and commissions, and when the subject deals with economics, Mr. Hunt is likely to be the secretary.

Latest incident of all, Mr. Hunt is now revealed to have been busy in the Commerce Department for the last five months at Mr. Hoover's order gathering material for a campaign of economic relief against just such a time of threatened depression as has now actually come about. In short, through Mr. Hunt's agency, plans are ert P. Lamont, Secretary of Com-merce, said that Mr. Hoover had authorized the quiet study by the "economic handy man" long before the speculative collapse, at a time when the President sensed the need of providing some sort of a "cushion for industry" in the event that depression ensued.

WHEN young James Coward started up his modest shoe business back in 1866, almost the first thing he discovered was that many thousands of people had difficulty with their feet. "What's wrong with their feet?" he asked himself—and suddenly the truth dawned upon him. It's just ill-fitting shoes that make the trouble.

So was there midnight oil burned in the little room back of his shop where Coward lived. Long hours he devoted to the study of feet . . . their structure and formation. He discovered that most shoes were built incorrectly.

He applied what he had learned to the shoes which he built . . . and soon found that he was getting quite a reputation for himself. James Coward was becoming famous for the comfort of his shoes! Can't Get Away from the Fact... "It pays to deal with a Food Specialist"

It is obviously impossible for a food merchant to carry hundreds of types of foods and have full knowledge of every article in stock. Rather than sell foods on which we are not experts, we confine our line to those table delicacies on which we are acknowledged authorities-Beverages, Spices, Extracts, Dairy Products and Smoked Meats. In these particular foods we are specialists. Every article we sell is guaranteed to be the finest and freshest of its kind obtainable.

Play Oxford might well have won by the odd event in seven as students of comparative form at the two universities had thought likely.

Tisdall gave the impression that it did not matter how far behind he was when he started. In the 480-yard high hurdles an Oxford flier was five yards ahead of him at the first hurdle, but Tisdall came up level at the third flight—or so it seemed from where the writer was sitting—and once ahead, he left his opponent standing. In the low hurdles Tisdall must have been nearly 15 yards behind when he began his furlong; but in unforgettable fashion he wiped out the handicap entirely at the third or fourth flight of obstacles and won easing up by three yards.

Tisdall Is the Star

To anyone who had not seen hir that in R. M.-N. Tisdall the victorious Light Blues have a worthy successor to that great line of post-war Cambridge athletes including three Olympic champions—H. M. Abrahams, D. G. A. Lowe and Lord Burghley.

It is not an exaggeration to describe Tisdall's performance as amazing for in both the high and low hurdles and in his quarter-mile stage of the one-hind the Oxford representative; but mile relay, the Cambridge secretary dge athree.

Cambridge had won Saturday's meetings before Oxford registered any success at all, but it was unfortunate that the Dark Blue quartet in the half-mile was disqualified for not passing the baton within the prescribed area at the change over point. Two Americans—F. L. Hoyde of Minnesota and E. W. Goodwillie of Cornell—ran brilliant furlongs, Goodwille, who was anchor man, making willie, who was anchor man, making up considerable leeway and reaching the tape two or three yards ahead of L. B. The shortage of really good hickory wood is one reason for the concession which, if the leading players avail themselves of it, will have the effect of standardof it, will have the effect of standard izing conditions in tournaments of in-

Hitherto if Americans accustomed to playing with steel shafts; have entered the British open championship—or any other event here for that matter—he has had to abandon the type of club to which he was accustomed and has had to abandon the type of club to which he was accustomed and adopt wood. The average golfer to whom participation in such contests is merely a dream will presumably benefit by the removal of the ban on steel, for he has been in the dilemma of having to purchase either good hickory weapons at increasingly high prices or rest content with clubs of prices or rest content with clubs of nferior quality.

Now, as there is nobody established in the home market with steel clubs, purchasers have got to go to American manufacturers who, of course have been in the business some time. Oxford Wins Two-Mile

Oxford's solitary success deserves special con-ment, for it was in the two-mile relay, which the Cantabs had taken in every previous carnival. Moreover, the Oxford half-milers had the satisfaction of breaking the record in hearty fashion. The previous best time was 8m. 32-5s. by Cambridge in 1922, but this year, on a rather heavy

IN FIRST ROUND

Upsets, Comebacks and New Course Record Feature P. G. A. Golf

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (A)-In first round crowded with all the thrills in golf-upsets, comebacks and a new course record-the "big guns" of the professional ranks moved through Truesday's opening 36-hole matches in quest of the 1929 championship of the Professional Golfers' Association.

Professional Golfers' Association.

The most dazzling round ever shot on the rolling fairways and tricky greens of the Hillcrest Country Club course saw Leonard H. Diegel of Agua Caliente, defending champion, post a morning card of 64, seven under par. He eliminated P. O. Hart of Wheeling, W. Va., by the ope-sided score of 10. greens of the Hillerest Country Club course saw Leonard H. Diegel of Agua Caliente, defending champion, post a morning card of 64, seven under par. He eliminated P. O. Hart of Wheeling, W. Va., by the one-sided score of 10 and 9. Diegel's 64 bettered by one stroke the former competitive record set Monday by Fred Morrison of Los Angeles, medalist. Hagen Defeats Shave Hardly less spectacular than Diegel's oring feat was the great "comeback scoring feat was the great "comeback" of Walter C. Hagen, present British champion and holder of the P. G. A. title five times in the past. Hagen overwhelmed Robert Shave, Aurora, O., 9 and 8 Tuesday. Monday Hagen arely squeezed into the qualifying lass with a poor 149.

Tied for thirty-second place with four others, Hagen was forced to play off the deadlock for the remainng two places in the qualifying list Two dropped out before darkness compelled a halt. Tuesday night Harry Cooper of Buffalo was ruled ineligible for play and his withdrawal

C. Robins, Engish public schools record-holder for the distance, in 4m 29 3-5s. The combined performances brought the record for the event down to 18m. 4s. Robins lived well up to his great reputation and appears one of the brightest "hopes" for Britain in future international contests. The American Goodwillie figured in the 400-yard relay which opened the program, but his fast 100-yard dash was discounted somewhat by a poor baton change with Gonin and Cambridge got home with a yard to spare.

Eugene Sarazen and John J. Farrell, former United States open titleholders, advanced to the second round. Farrell was pressed a bit to beat out John Golden, Paterson, N. The medalist, Morrison, removed J. H. Kirkwood, Philadelphia, from the ranks of contenders, 5 and 4, and William Mehlhorn, New York, had an easy time beating Guy Paulsen, Chicago, 7 and 6. The summary:

Tulane's line proved too much for Coach H. R. Cohen's forward wall and the latter drew many penalties for offside play. A long pass from Capt. W. B. Banker '30 to F. X. ## The Art of Fagoting AGOTING is one of the most interesting and dainty methods of trimming to be found. It may be bought by the yard, in either white or pastel shades, and is caught on two folded pieces of bias organdie tape, the outside ends of which are slit so that it may be slipped right on the dress or other garment. To do the work oneself is, however, a satisfaction to the lover of needlework, and the stitch is fascinating.

One proceeds in this manner: First, the cloth is put on a piece of brown wrapping paper and basted down flat; then, when the fagoting is to be worked, two parallel lines are drawn. The actual needlework is but a simple catch stitch. Take a small stitch on one side of the line, fold over the thread as one would for a buttonhole stitch, cross over diagonally, take another stitch, and so on until the whole is complete. Then cut the paper and the material through the center of the two lines, tear away the paper and turn back the two loose edges of cloth and sew them down with either a running stitch or hem.

The beginner would be wise to ex-periment on an odd piece of material just to get the exact idea before sewing on the finished dress.

The frock pictured shows a considerable amount of fagoting, more, perhaps, than one would care to do oneself. In such a case the ready-made trimming would come in very nicely, and, as it is all bias, even the little rosette pocket could be inserted with ease. The sleeves are made en-tirely of fagoting, as is the little okelike waist.

While a silk of contrasting shade often works out satisfactorily, black is usually smartest on pastel or even darker colors.

Not only children's dresses, but also adults' frocks are being shown fin-ished in this delightful stitching.

We all have watched its intricate mote-multitudes, pressing, shifting, jostling, speaking and rejoicing,—and we may have wished to convey our concept of them to another. We may have thought of similies and comparisons, crowds or a flock of birds or a shoal of fish. We may even have written some lines in expression of our thought, made a list of verbs, or adjectives, or nouns and adjectives together. NEW YORK—Stocks lacked some of the buoyancy of yesterday, but they nevertheless moved forward on a rising volume of trading. As the short interest dwindles, the momentum of the market is bound to decline, and it is doubtful whether the main body of investors are yet ready to follow stocks on their advance.

Professional operations for the rise doubtless are increasing and the public following may be growing, but doubting Thomases are still too numerous in Wall Street to make the task of putting stocks higher an easy one. Still the market is relieved of distressed liquidation, is aided by cheap money, is encouraged by the state of government finance and general industry and is in the midst of holiday trade activity.

Public utility stocks proved to be particularly easy to move and aided by unfounded merger rumors some of them climbed several points. The best gains were scored by American Watter Works, Western Union, Columbia Gas, United Gas Improvement, Standard Gas & Electric, American Power & Light and North American.

News Is Favorable

While the stock market itself was the most cheering development of the day, the general run of news was mostly on the favorable side. Further decline in railroad traffic was reported, but it is largely seasonal, while steel mill production apparently has ceased to decline.

In the background is, to be sure, the shadow of a piper who may have to be paid if federal, state and munipical expenditures solely for the purpose of stimulating business are carried too far. But the series of White House conferences and the President's message to Congress have at least uncovered the fundamental soundness of our business structure, and reminded the country of how rapid a recovery is possible.

If tax reductions now being proposed cannot be made permanent; most taxpayers may again be in a position to bear heavier loads later. Wall Street, of course, is inclined to agree with Secretary Mellon that cor-porations are overtaxed.

Opinions on Hoover Message

The reaction of stock exchange members to President Hoover's message, as revealed by market lefters sent out this 'morning, was one of general approval.' Virtually all brokerage firms called the message "constructive," and most of them thought it had something to do with the short covering rally in stocks vesterday.

it had something to do with the short covering rally in stocks yesterday. While believing that the President in his message and in his business conferences is doing much to restore confidence, so chastened is Wall Street at this time that almost no one is predicting an uninterrupted bull market starting from this point, Perhaps the street thinks more of Hoover's ideas than it does of their chances of ideas than it does of their chances of adoption by Congress.

However, the majority believe we are in a rallying period which may are in a rallying period which may last the greater part of the month and at least give us a "white Christmas."

The only fear expressed is that the advance may be too rapid.
The drop of $2,092,000,000 in brokers loans during November, as reported last night by the stock exchange, seems to have satisfied everybody, judging from published comment. However, the decline was less than indicated by the weekly reports of the Federal Reserve Board. In spite of the rally yesterday, there is a general expectation of another decline in the weekly figures, for report tomorrow. This week's figures should throw some light on the character of the recent buying.

Steel Trade Reviews

Steel Trade Reviews

This week's reviews of the steel trade are more cheerful than they have been of late. The decline in production, according to the Iron Age, has been arrested, although November brought a sharp drop in pig-iron output. In most districts the industry is operating from 65 to 70 per cent of capacity, but finally automobile demand has risen.

Railroad and structural steel orders are "conspicuously good." While prices remain to be tested for first quarter, most of them are quotably unchanged. The Steel Corporation will issue its unfilled tonnage statement a week from Friday and it would not be surprising if a decrease were shown.

While the slump in railroad car leadings during November has been marked, the decline should not give rise to any great amount of pessimism. Compared with a year ago, when business was on the rise, weekly reports are showing a decided falling off. However, the totals are still higher than for corresponding weeks in 1927.

Most of the decrease has taken place in miscellaneous freight.

Government issues were buoyant, but strength was most impressive among the good railroad issues. Many of them reached new high levels for the year and the supply when real buying orders are placed is found to be small.

ISLAND CREEK COAL OUTPUT OFF ISLAND CREEK COAL OUTPUT OFF
BOSTON—During the latter half of November the production of Island Creek Coal Co, declined from the high rate of the first half of that month and the high rate of October. This was due to observance of the Thanksgiving holiday and closing of the Lake business toward the end of the month, and also to a degree to the lower rate of general industrial activity. Whereas in the first half of the month output was around 315,000 tons, the full month's total is expected to be approximately 565,000 tons. This would compare with 637,839 tons in October, and would be slightly ahead of the 561,635-ton output in November, 1923.

NOVEMBER FAILURES FEWER NOVEMBER FAILURES FEWER

Bradstreet's this week will say: "The November failure showing may lay claim to being a remarkably good one, in view of the number and variety of the exciting features that that month included. There is shown in the tabulated report to Bradstreet's a decrease both in number and in liabilities from November a year ago, although the latter month returns more failures and larger liabilities than in the longer month of October. In addition, it may be noted that November failures were fewer also than in November of both 1927 and 1926, while liabilities, although heavier than in November, 1927, were smaller than in November, 1926."

STEADIER TONE DISPLAYED IN LONDON MARKET

Tin Has Further Decline-Money in Keener Demand -Rhodesians Easier

BY SPECIAL CARLE Copyright 1929. All Rights Reserved. LONDON—There was a steadier tone on the Stock Exchange today around the lower price levels now established. The volume of business was small but constant and there was no renewal of liquidation. Opinion here holds that the excitement in Wall Street is finished and is to be followed by a more stable but featureless period for the remainder of this year.

A. small firm, Ernest T. Marter & Co., was declared a defaulter today, but this was of no special significance.

The first favorable reference to Fritish Celanese was made in a speech by Lord Harriss.

There was uneasiness as to the position of tin because of a letter in the newspapers suggesting that there was disagreement on the part of some large producers regarding restriction of output, despite last week's unanimous vote. London tin is now falling steadily. It was 113-16 today and the market is probably too weak to justiff further inside support.

Features in the account show that the recovery of the Rhodesians last week was due in part to shop support, and the tone was easier today.

A rally at Paris of the stocks of Rio Tinto and de Beers is attributed to intervention by the banks and French authorities desiring to keep the markets good at present in view of international plans.

Home railways continue to report satisfactory traffic, and there was, a better tone in undergrounds, with the intentions of the Government being more calmly interpreted after a semi-inspired newspaper announcement

The substantial sum falling due today for repayment to the Bank of England on account of last week's borrowings by the market caused a keener demand for money, and day loans were quoted around 5 per cent.
In the discount market 90-day bills were setadier at 4% per cent with a larger supply of bills ocming forward from Germany and Holland.

There was disappointment that the Bank of England yesterday gained only $170,000 in gold. France taking fe40,000 and India and trade $140,000 out of $935,000 auctioned. This was offset by surprise at the sudden strength in steeling, which is now quoted at 4.88 3-22 against the dollar and at 123.89½ for the franc. The Satisfaction at the temporarily high Satisfaction at the temporarily high quotation of the pound is tempered, however, by the uncertainty as to whether France, having replenished her London balance from America, will proceed to transfer the bulk of such balances to Paris in gold, An interesting development resulting from the present wide margin between discount and bankers advance rates is the increase in commercial bills being drawn here for the purpose of industrial finance.

The latest information today suggests the possibility of a bank rate reduction tomorrow.

Industrialists as Peace Lords

THE proposition of Edward N. Hurley, of Chicago, made to the International Chamber of Commerce, that war might be averted in future by the concerted action of big business men in various countries who control raw materials and vital factors in transportation and power activities, is exceedingly interesting. To begin with, it emphasizes the shift of real power from politicians and government officials to the heads of great business enterprises. The world has seen kings, emperors, and war lords stripped of the power to prosecute war, and the substitution of parliaments and responsible ministries.

Comes now the suggestion, with a certain degree of plausibility, that the men who control the useful services of business can, if they choose, nullify the warlike endeavors of diplomatists, statesmen, and parliaments. Moreover, it is interesting to note how comparatively few are the powerful leaders whose control of essential industries is so complete that concerted action on their part would make the prosecution of war impossible. Mr. Hurley lists thirty-one; probably a complete list of the captains of industry, who might, if they chose, be captains in the struggle for world peace would not exceed twoscore. If these men should deny to a belligerent nation its necessary supplies of steel, of copper, of manganese, of rubber, of petroleum, of the chemical products controlled by a few companies, war would stop for lack of raw materials. Is it possible that they could be organized to such an end?

Our neighbor, the Boston Herald, ridicules Mr. Hurley's proposition on the theory that it "presupposes a noble indifference to legitimate 'Is this indeed a fact? Immediate profits and colossal ones do no doubt accrue to the industrial enterprises of nations in time of war, whether they be neutrals or belligerents, but does not the experience of the last world-wide struggle prove only too clearly that the profit was evanescent, that it may have meant the profits of ten years reaped in one, and followed by nine years of depression, high taxation, depreciating currency, and other ills which inevitably follow war? It may well be questioned whether, if, instead of taking the four years of the World War as a basis for computation, two decades, in which that war should be comprehended, were taken, it would not be shown that big business suffered rather than profited by the cataclysm. It may be doubted whether the d of any great industry would seriously set up the proposition that war should be to his stockholders anything except an ultimately heavy burden and a curse.

Mr. Hurley, who has set forth this proposition, is no theorist, no sentimental pacifist. As head of the Shipping Board during the war he had ample opportunity to observe all which a great struggle of that sort does to stimulate business. As an active member of the International Chamber of Commerce he has had unusual opportunities to observe the attitude of great industrialists in both the United States and abroad toward peace and war. That he should have come forward seriously with this proposition gives it a standing which should assure for it serious consideration not only by the body to which it was addressed, but by the press of the world. It cannot be lightly set aside as a thing savoring of the millennium.

The whole trend of modern society is toward the increasing power and authority of those who direct the great business enterprises of the twentieth century. That they cannot be enlisted on the side of peace is a conclusion which no one at all cognizant of the attitude of the men to whom Mr. Hurley has addressed himself will for a moment accept.

Is History Repeating Itself?

TS THE actual existence of the United States of America any indication of the possibility of forming a United States of Europe? Repeatedly it has been pointed out that the United States of America holds over Europe the inestimable advantage of a common language, and this goes a long way toward rendering a com-parison unreliable. But the experience of the United States of America is relevant and encouraging to those who are interested in a United States of Europe. And in one regard it is reasonable to maintain that a true parallel exists between the two. The real comparison should be made, not between the Europe and America of today, but between the Europe of today and the America of the last decades of the eighteenth century. At that time the prospect of a United States of America seemed almost as remote and as impossible as the prospect of a united Europe

During the War of Independence the same objections lay against the former scheme as now lie against the latter. Consider the diversity of race and language. A Pennsylvanian of the period said that half of the 250,000 inhabitants of his State were Germans, Swedes or Dutch, and another remarked that they showed no sign whatever of blending into one nation with the original British settlers, since they had separate schools, and printed books and newspapers in their own languages. Nor were the economic interests or the religious convictions of the different parts of the continent anything but an apparently serious cause of disharmony, just as they are in Europe today.

In the Virginia debates on ratifying the Federal Constitution in 1788 it was maintained that no single government could be successfully set over so many different cultures, peoples and climates as existed in America. Yet everyone knows how triumphantly these difficulties have in the one case been surmounted; and since it is these very difficulties that are cropping up today in Europe, a comparison with the American experience is surely neither irrelevant nor misleading.

Diplomacy for the Senate

WIGHT W. MORROW'S remarkable ability to establish an atmosphere of good will, so brilliantly demonstrated in his ambassadorship to Mexico, doubtless led to his appointment on the American delegation to the approaching Naval Conference. The same talent may well have influenced Morgan F. Larson, Governor of New Jersey, in his decision to name Mr. Morrow to the United States Senate on his return from London. Seldom, certainly, has the Senate offered a fairer field for a builder of intelligent good will. Its atmosphere is too often that of battle-field hostility.

No less valuable should be the qualities of clear-thinking leadership which made Mr. Morrow a distinguished lawver and eminent financier before he went to Mexico. And the Senate has need of leadership. Recent exhibitions of factional floundering prove that. In his own party, particularly, the man who revolutionized diplomacy, not only in Mexico but to some extent in the State Department, should find ample opportunity for shirt-sleeve diplomacy. The Old Guard, the Young Guard and the insurgents could discover a common denominator on many questions in Mr. Morrow's progressive conservatism. In that respect, too, he could become a natural spokesman for President Hoover's conservative liberalism.

There are many employments for any man gifted with the technique of good will. Mr. Hoover and Mr. MacDonald, as well as Mr. Morrow, have shown what wonders it can work in international affairs. We cannot have toomuch of it in the national sphere.

Germany Proves Itself Again

R. ALFRED HUGENBERG'S shrewdly calculated project to harass the German Republic is defeating its own purpose. At the very outset his widely advertised plebiscite against the Young plan was doomed to ultimate failure. Its first test barely mustered sufficient strength to force its introduction into the Reichstag, and last week the Reichstag rejected the measure by the decisive verdict of 312 to 80. A vote of the whole electorate will be held

And what has been the effect of all this political maneuvering on the part of the Nationalist leader? Has it weakened the position of the Democratic and Liberal Parties? Has it found the German people ready to exchange for an ill-advised gesture of sentiment the constructive achievements of the late Gustav Stresemann's far-visioned foreign policy? Has it succeeded in rallying to its own cause new constituents and new strength? It has done none of these things. To the contrary it has in this issue alienated the moderate wing of the Nationalists; it has perpetuated a debate which, as its true significance has become clearer, has served to consolidate popular support of the Republic; it has alarmed conservative industry, which has no fancy for a return to the Dawes scale of reparation payments; and finally it has almost unscrupulously disserved the German Nation by requiring the Government to unqualifiedly praise the Young plan, thereby damaging in a measure the tactical position of German statesmen whenever a suitable opportunity for revision might present itself.

All in all the course which the Hugenberg leadership has pursued in the matter of the Young plan plebiscite has hardly reflected credit on the Nationalist cause and, as the Reichstag vote with its numerous deflections from Dr. Hugenberg's own group pointedly indicates, many Nationalists themselves are dissatisfied with such tactics.

For the last eleven years the Republic has been serving Germany with courage and vision. The unhappy legacies of the war are today being gradually liquidated. The Young plan is a distinct advance over the demands of the Dawes commission, and while itself something less than ideal, it deserves and is receiving the support of dominant German opinion. Last week the last remnant of the French and Belgian troops evacuated the second Rhineland zone. A settlement in the Saar is in the offing. The record of the Republic, wrought under the most difficult and distressing circumstances, is a record truly to be admired—a record which is a fine tribute to the innate and distinguishing qualities of the German people and their capacity for government.

New York's Government of Laws

VERY schoolboy knows that the Massachuresetts Constitution of 1780 explicitly separated the three departments of the Government-executive, legislative, and judicial-"to the end that this may be a government of laws and not of men." It is more difficult for the schoolboy to learn why this is necessary. He is told that, in actual practice, in both state and nation, it is almost impossible to keep the three departments separate.

In New York, however, the Court of Appeals has recently handed down a decision which asserts in uncompromising terms the separateness of the three departments of the Government. The controversy was between a Democratic Governor and a Republican Legislature. The decision was in favor of the Governor, but his victory is a Pyrrhic one. Could the Legislature, in making a lump sum appropriation for a department of the state government, stipulate that the apportioning of the appropriation should be approved by the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the lower house, and the Governor? This was the question which was asked, and the Court of Appeals answered it in the negative. The court declared that the Legislature thereby conferred administrative powers on the two committee chairmen and gave them appointments to offices which were separate from their offices as members of the Legislature.

Clearly the court could have decided the other way. The case was one on which reasonable, intelligent men could differ. It illustrated very well the fact that in many constitutional issues two results are possible. Often a court can decide either way it wishes. Policy, not law, governs its determination. For the New York Court of Appeals could, in this case, have declared that the Legislature's power to appropriate was absolute. If the Legislature wished to grant lump sums with limitations, it could do so, since it could refuse to grant lump sums at all. The greater power included the lesser. What the court did, however, in a long and learned opinion, was to reassert the doctrine of the separation of powers, and to declare unconstitutional the Legislature's delegating to committee chairmen the authority to act with the Governor in dividing up, between salaries and other expenses, lump sums which the Legislature had appropriated.

With such procedure pronounced unconstitutional, the probability is that the Legislature will refuse to make lump appropriations. This will be unfortunate. One of the handicaps of public administration in the United States is lack of flexibility under line-by-line legislative appropriation acts. Conditions change from day to day, but the administrators can ask for relief only once a year when the Legislature is in session. Lump sum appropriations were devised to get away from this rigidity and to permit greater efficiency. But the New York Legislature wished to retain some control through its representatives and the Governor. This the Court of Appeals has declared unconstitutional, and the possibility is that the result will be a return to line-by-line appropriation

Checking Up Homer's Geography

ARCHÆOLOGY has within the last half century made several important to little known or only vaguely surmised facts of ancient history. Perhaps the most striking of these is the confirmation in a number of instances of what have hitherto been regarded as mere imaginative embroideries of the greatest of poets of old, who, it was assumed, fed on legends and sang of events that never took place and of places that never existed. It was Heinrich Schliemann, a German business man, who first discovered the site of the famous city of Troy, and now, it is reported, Sir Rennell Rodd, the eminent English diplomatist and authority on Homer, is to search the Mediterranean island of Thiaki for the site of Ulysses'

It is true that there is still apparently a certain doubt as to whether the modern island of Thiaki is the Ithaca of Homer; for the grottoes, cliffs and jagged reefs of that sunny island, familiar to every reader of the Odyssey, fail to correspond to the topographical peculiarities of Thiaki, a fact that is sufficient to convince Prof. W. Doerfeld, Schliemann's successor in Germany, that a larger island in the same group was more probably the home of Odysseus.

But Sir Rennell Rodd and Victor Bérard, the French Homeric scholar, are decidedly of the opinion that the discrepancies between Homer's descriptions of Ithaca and the actual scenery of Thiaki are only the natural consequences of the poetic imagination which, in the famous phrase of Wordsworth, takes its origin from emotion recollected in tranquillity.

While it has always been difficult to discern where, in heroic poetry or legendary mythology, fact merges into fable, every endeavor to do so deserves to succeed. In this connection, however, the curious fact should not be forgotten that even within the sphere of well-authenticated historical data it is often difficult for the historian to make sure of his material. For manuscripts of historic value that have not yet been secured by national institutions have of late shown a tendency to migrate through the public auction room to different countries, and not infrequently a collection of documents is dispersed among several owners with the result that important facts are sometimes difficult to trace to their source. Indeed, the whole question of the preservation of records is claiming special attention of historical research bodies, and it is encouraging to learn that an attempt is now being made to compile a census of historical manuscripts to be found in Great Britain.

Editorial Notes

Something like $600,000,000 has been accumulated in the little "Christmas clubs," according to the estimates now made by the savings banks of the United States. This fund is approximately 10 per cent larger than similar savings last year, and the number of persons responsible for it-some 9,000,000-is also about 10 per cent larger. It is especially significant at this particular moment that so large a part of the American people have been practicing foresight and that such a large amount of money is to be returned to the hands of the consuming public at a seemingly critical time.

One of the measures promised by the new Australian Labor Government is in harmony with the peace trend of today. In the place of compulsory military training, now in force, the voluntary system is again to be put in operation. Every step forward is a step in the right direc-

A proof of the growing safety of aviation is found in the fact that the Prince of Wales, who gave up following the hounds out of consideration to the feelings of the English people, has now a plane and a pilot of his own, and covers many of his appointments by air.

Ramsay MacDonald, who says that the mists of today do not obscure the hopes of tomorrow, knows, of course, that it is the sun shining through the mist that makes the rainbow.

The slogan used during a Swiss dry campaign, 'The drinking worker does not think: the thinking worker does not drink!" furnishes food for thought.

"Go North Young Man," Says Canada

is one of many striking phrases taken from a book just off the press on the Dominion's new era of rapid development. A Canadian should have written the work, but it was an American who did so. And perhaps it is better thus. A Canadian author might have been suspected of booming his own country. An outsider writing of Canada may be conceived to have written

In "Go North Young Man" (McClelland & Stewart, Toronto), Courtney Ryley Cooper has somewhat altered Horace Greeley's advice of two generations ago. After giving much study to his subject, he thinks that young Americans should seek their fortunes in this Dominion and its steadily marching frontiers. He is fascinated by the big things he has lately seen being done in northern Quebec, northern Ontario, northern Manitoba, northern Saskatchewan, northern Alberta and the Northwest Terri tories even to the arctic circle and beyond.

Mr. Cooper repeats the forecast that Canada will some day be the dominant state of the British Empire, and he proceeds to explain why the new country is making giant strides after being quiescent for so long. The reason, he says, is the New North, crammed with minerals, thundering with possibilities for hydroelectric development, sufficiently tillable at intervals to assure small fortunes to hard-working pioneers. And everywhere it bristles with the spires of soft woods which return almost ton for ton in newsprint and sulphide papers, to say nothing of the development of cellulose fiber which produces the silky rayon and kindred products. This is the land which lately belonged only to the Indian trapper and the dog-sled driver, to the wandering factor of the Hudson's Bay Company and the lone French-Canadian pioneer.

1 1 1 The area under development rapidly spreads and, says the author, "As the men pour in, so pour the millions of dollars, hundreds upon hundreds of them, money from the United States, from older Canada, from England. . . Twenty-five millions for this, a hundred millions for something else; twenty millions more for a year's railroad building, ten millions for the development of a single mine, another million for prospecting—just to find out if a piece of ground is worth spending a real sum of money

So suddenly, overnight seemingly, the North Country began to crack wide open. A crevice is extending across the north of the whole Dominion now, widened more in the last three years than in all the history of Canada. From Labrador, across the Ungava country, into northern Quebec, across the New North of Ontario, and through the Patricia district, into Manitoba, and northward into the Barren Lands and beyond, across Saskatchewan, and Alberta, and British Columbia, and into the Yukon, the northward push is going forward like the skirmishing lines of a tremendous army.

The westward flow of empire in the history of the United States is puny compared to it. In fact, there is no comparison; the dramatics of the Alaskan rush were easier to describe because they were concentrated. But they were no more prevalent.

1 1 As the writer points out, this northward push, incidentally, is not one which merely quests for gold or other minerals, like the chase of '98. It includes agriculture, and the opening up of farming districts, but it is not solely concerned with that, as was the opening of Oklahoma and the Cherokee Strip. It concerns railroad building, under almost as many hardships and privations as those of the building of the Kansas Pacific and the Union Pacific, but that, too, is a component: For there is everything in

"LLIMITABLE development in Canada's Northland" the swing to the North, manufacturing, agriculture, mines, is one of many striking phrases taken from a book water power, the hope of oil and coal, smelters, railroads, opening of new steamship lines, cities-all these are the impulses of a country which has been, until the last few years, a frontier in every sense of the word.

As might be expected, the author deals with the great Laurentian Plateau or Pre-Cambrian Shield which occupies most of central and northern Canada, overlapping for a few miles into the United States south and west of Lake Superior. Starting with this slight extension of the Canadian Shield into Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota, he points out that it has given the world the Michigan copper mines and the Mesaba iron range, upon which is based most of the industrial prosperity of onehalf the Republic. In Canada, the same mineral formations have provided most of the widely distributed mining camps of all the central provinces.

As already indicated, Canada's rapid development in the last few years is based in great measure on the abundance and wide distribution of her water powers, which provide ample motive energy for the utilization of her pulp forests and mineral resources. The "Duke-Price" interests on the Saguenay River are developing more than a million horsepower for one project alone, the control of the world's aluminum market. One unit is in operation and the rest are under construction. To gain a true idea of the water powers available, all one has to do is to visualize an industrial map of Canada from the east to the west. It is an incessant string of pulp and paper mills located between the Atlantic and the prairie provinces, 132 in all, all of them running on water power, and some of these power plants developing as much as 100,000 horsepower.

After one finishes with paper mills, one can turn to the smelters and mine mills which are dotting Canada from the Rockies to Quebec—and again it is the muskeg water that is turning out the copper, the gold, the silver, and the lead and zinc to keep a nation busy with manufactures.

The writer does not overlook the early part played by the Gentlemen Adventurers Trading Into Hudson Bay. The Hudson's Bay Company has, within the last eight years, established more posts within the arctic circle than existed in all its previous history. The romance of the Hudson's Bay Railway and Fort Churchill are touched upon, but even these do not approximate to the

There will be no last frontier for Canada until the arctic circle has been reached and crossed by a workaday world, until business men talk as casually of going there as they now speak of going out to Denver in the United States, across what once was the great American desert. Nor will the frontier stop with the passage of the arctic circle. In these days of 100-mile-an-hour airplanes, which have replaced the slow canoe and plodding covered wagon work of exploration and development, it is just as logical to think of a route to the northern portions of Europe by traveling across the roof of the world, as it once was to think of crossing the continent with a railroad.

As the writer puts it, what will happen in the next five years is, of course, a conjecture, but one must naturally gauge the future by the past. A year and a half ago there was not a gasoline cache or an airplane base north of Fort Churchill. Today there are forty prospecting bases, gas and food caches between Hudson Bay and the Rocky Mountains, most of them established by the N. A. M. E., organized by Jack Hammell, by Dominion Explorers, Ltd., organized by Colonel MacAlpine of Ventures, Ltd., who was recently lost for two months in the arctic circle, and by the Lindsleys of New England. ## From the World's Great Capitals--Moscow

USSIA has long been employing the radio as an aid K to popular education. If one "tunes in" on any of the Moscow stations one often hears a lesson in a foreign language, a course of a constructive nature, or a report on some political or economic subject. Now a further step in this direction is marked by the inauguration here of a radio university, which has already enrolled more than 2000 students, while 8000 more have applied for admission. The radio university is designed for persons who cannot attend regular high educational institutions and offers both specialized and general educational courses

Scenes in Kabul, the capital of Afghanistan, on the eve of the recent capture of the city by the forces of Gen. Nadir Khan, were vividly described in a letter which was printed in one of the Moscow newspapers. The bazaar, which in eastern cities is usually the chief center of rumor and gossip, had long been seething with talk of impending change, and the Ameer who had led the successful rebellion against King Amanullah and has now himself been ousted by Nadir Khan organized a special secret police force to apprehend and punish the most dangerous spreaders of bad news. When the first shells from Nadir Khan's forces fell in the outskirts of the city the bazaar was closed and most of the inhabitants barricaded themselves in their houses, while the Ameer rushed about attempting to rally his few troops in an effort to retain his violently acquired throne. The writer of the letter attributes the downfall of the Ameer to the fact that he had dispatched most of his troops on distant expeditions to the south and east, leaving Kabul weakly guarded, a circumstance of which Nadir Khan was quick to take advantage.

New and revolutionary tendencies in art, literature and drama will possess a stalwart champion in F. F. Raskolnikoff, recently appointed head of the Department of Fine Arts under the Commissariat for Education. This department exercises a general supervision over plays, concerts and other forms of public entertainment. Mr. Raskolnikoff, who is still a comparatively young man, had an adventurous career during the revolution. One of the leaders of the insurgent Kronstadt sailors, who were among the first champions of Bolshevism, he subsequently took command of the Soviet flotilla on the River Volga and was later captured in the course of a naval engagement between British and Bolshevist warships in the Gulf of Finland, being taken to England as a war prisoner and subsequently exchanged. For a time he was Ambassador to Afghanistan being recalled a few months after the issue of Lord Curzon's ultimatum to the Soviet Government in the spring of 1923. In his first interview after assuming his new post, Mr. Raskolnikoff promised to give material support to the revolutionary theater of Vsevolod Meierhold, which he characterized as "a great achievement of Soviet culture." Declaring that "petty bourgeois and reactionary manifestations in the theater and in literature do not always encounter decisive rejection," Mr. Raskolnikoff asserted that he would always carry out a decisive struggle for a clear and consistent political line in the guidance of all fields of art. 1 1 1

The rapid tempo of Soviet industrial development, combined with the shortage of many materials and the difficulty of importing them in adequate quantities from abroad, has led to the adoption of a number of substitutes and new expedients, designed to avoid the excessive use of the materials which are lacking. So a Moscow engineer, Mr. Abarbanel, has received a reward for devising a new method of using cement instead of lead in the laying of pipes. Experiments are also being made in the manufacture of synthetic rubber.

Efforts are already being made to organize demonstrations of Young Communists against the celebration of Christmas. In preliminary instructions which have been issued in this connection, it is suggested that agitation should be aimed not so much against religious beliefs themselves as against the alleged rôle of religion as a form of service to political reaction and economic exploitation. Loudspeakers in the public squares of Moscow will accompany the antireligious demonstrations, and the Young Communists are supposed to carry on an active campaign for closing churches wherever public sentiment is not too strongly opposed to such action.

1 1 1 The building of a new road is usually a rather commonplace affair; but the highway which is being constructed a, perhaps the wildest, most isolated and most inaccessible part of the Caucasus region, is of noteworthy importance, both because of the engineering difficulties which must be solved and because of its importance for the inhabitants of the country, who for centuries have lived according to their primitive customs, shut off from the outside world by towering peaks and giant mountain ranges. Only within recent years the precarious footpath which led into Swanetia was made passable for horses. It is believed that the completion of the road, which has been started, but has suffered some delay because of the neglect of the budget authorities last year to make the necessary appropriation, will ultimately transform Swanetia into a minor Switzerland, attracting tourists by the beauty of its scenery and the picturesque costumes and dwellings of the inhabitants, and producing for the market considerable quantities of milk and dairy products, since the mountain meadows of Swanetia afford excellent pasturage for sheep and cattle.

1 1 1 With a view to making the "pyatiletka," or five-year plan of national economic development, comprehensible even to the most remote and backward peoples of the Soviet Union, the Central Publishing House of the Nationalities has issued a placard in twenty-two languages, showing with a mass of illustrations what the country hopes to achieve in the building of factories, electrical stations, large state and collective farms, etc., by the end of the five-year period.

Crossing the Canadian Border

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

Regarding "Canadian Students at the Border," I would like to add my experience coming to Boston as a nurse student to take a year's post-graduate course in nursing. I was put through several experiences which were far from pleasant. I made inquiries at the American consul's office in Toronto regarding a student entering the United States of America for one year. I was told there that student nurses had no trouble entering the United States. and that they (the consulate in Toronto) would consider that I was going for a year's holiday; they did not know, however, what the officials at the border would think about it. Why have consulates in the different cities if their word does not stand, or can be overthrown by an individual at the border?

The institution to which I was coming was anxious that I should have all the privileges of citizenship for the year. so I took steps to get a visé. This was in March, and I was to start duties in May. I was from March until July getting papers straightened out. Several times during this experience I had to stand in line for hours with people of all nationalities waiting to answer a simple question or ask one. I was requested to furnish myself with a passport, which meant I had to send to Ottawa with $5. My entering the United States of America cost me $27.50: Passport $5, medical certificates $3, passport photos $1.50, visa $10,

I was told the last day of getting things settled it wasn't necessary for me to have gone through all this as I could have entered without. Then why put one through such experiences when it is not necessary? Are there no rules and regulations relative to crossing the border? or is one at the mercy of the whim of an official who may say while another official to the same applicant might give an unqualified "yes"? Is this a just condition?
